

Abstract number: S3-13

TeV anisotropy

30 min. invited talk

Observation and modeling of cosmic-ray anisotropy observed with the Tibet air shower array

Takita, Masato¹ and for the Tibet ASgamma collaboration, theTibetASgammacollaboration²

¹Institute for Cosmic Ray Research, the University of Tokyo

²the Tibet ASgamma collaboration

The Tibet air shower array (37,000 m² in area) is located at 4,300m above sea level, in Tibet, China. It observes cosmic-ray induced air shower events with energies more than a few TeV. Cosmic-ray anisotropy observed with the Tibet air shower array will be presented. In addition, modeling of the observed anisotropy will be discussed.